County agency teams up with library

GRANITE CITY - The Madison County Employment and Training Department has joined forces with the Six Mile Regional Library to assist residents looking for a job by offering a free informational job search workshop.

The two-hour job search workshop will be held on Thursday, November 10, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. at the Six Mile Regional Library. Presenters from both entities will give job search tips and resources available on line, at the Southwestern Illinois workNet Center and at the library. Topics covered will include resume key word construction, the online application process, interview questions and following up after a job interview. The workshop is free and open to the public. No registration is required; attendance will be on a first-come first served basis. As the need arises, this workshop may be repeated on an ongoing basis.

“I am very pleased that we can work with such a wonderful resource as the Six Mile Regional Library. Although there have been cuts to our budget and closing of some offices, we now have a great partner to help us outreach into the community,” said David Stoecklin, executive director of the Madison County Employment and Training Department. “The assets that the local libraries have available work nicely with the many services our department can provide. We are excited about this partnership and the chance to serve residents in the community. The Internet offers a portal to many ways in which to search for work, assess career opportunities, and seek resources. We will be working with the library to provide access and expertise to help folks use these resources.”

Each workshop participant will be surveyed for additional services that either Madison County Employment and Training Department or the Six Mile Regional Library can provide such as career counseling or one-on-one staff assistance. These services may be provided at the library or at the Southwestern Illinois workNet Center in East Alton.

Madison County Board Chairman Alan Dunstan also said he is pleased with the partnership.

“Bringing county services to the community and partnering with the local libraries is one way we are stretching the limited resources we all have available,” he said. “Budget cuts have forced the closing of some Madison County offices and reductions in our staff, but the need still exists. This partnership is helping us continue to assist folks in need of job search assistance. I am looking forward to expanding this service in the months to come. We need to work closely with all of the partners working to strengthen our economy and get people back to work.”

The Six Mile Regional Library is committed to assisting residents with their job search and has expanded its services to accommodate the unemployed job-seeker. Madison County Employment and Training will work in conjunction with the library to broaden the job resources made available to the community with continuing their dedication to economic and workforce development.

The Six Mile Regional Library offers job search assistance both online and hard copy that are free to the public during regular library hours. It is located at 2001 Delmar St., Granite City, Visit the website at www.sixmilerld.org for more information about all its services.

The MCETD implements WIA funding in Madison and Bond Counties. The department operates one comprehensive center and one satellite office to help individuals find a job and to assist business owners to find the right employees.
